In order to appeal to you for a public records fee waiver, I have to have a denial from my request for appeal to the city.

How long must I wait before I consider non response to be a denial?

I have been trying to get records since June 14th. They have dragged on this beyond their own timelines, but haven't wanted to bother you with it because, eventually, they get to it.

But, its getting to the point of ridiculous. The irony being that the city I live in is the only one where this is ever an issue. Other cities don't even charge me and respond, usually, within 24 hours. In this case, the city has charged me fees that conflict with their own written policy.

Please let me know and I will prepare the documentation.

Thank you.

Just as an FYI - I never got a response to this from you and I still haven't received the records from them.

Its been two years.

Are you able to tell me what a reasonable amount of time to wait before it would be considered a denial?

Just curious.

Ms. Flood:

I went back in my emails to see why I hadn't responded to you. It appears that I was headed out of town when you sent it and I missed it when I returned. My apologies.

Certainly, no response for this long can be deemed a denial.

Please provide a copy of your written request to the City and I will move it along.

Again, my apologies for having missed your email of before.

Attached are the records fees resolutions, the original document request, the fee determination and my request for a waiver at the city level.

I am appealing the denial of fee waiver to your office.

Thank you.
